County and City Data Book, 1952

Introduction

This volume is one of a series of supplements to the Statistical Abstract of the United States, and is designed to meet the need for summary statistics for small geographic areas. Compactly assembled in this volume are 128 items of data for each county, standard metropolitan area, State, and geographic division; and 133 items of data for each of 484 cities having 25,000 or more inhabitants in 1950. Also included is a table showing the number of inhabitants of all urban places (mostly incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more) in 1950.

The information shown has been assembled into a one-volume reference book to assist businessmen, public officials, research workers, statisticians, teachers, librarians, students, and others who have a recurring need for a compact single source of statistics relating to counties, cities, and metropolitan areas. Similar to other publications in the Statistical Abstract series, this volume brings together data which are scattered in a number of publications or which are obtainable only through inquiries addressed to separate governmental and private agencies. Furthermore, the descriptive notes provide the user with specific references to the original sources of the data to which he or she may turn for additional statistics or for more extensive information than is supplied here concerning questions of definition of terms, degree of accuracy of the figures, methods of collection, etc.

The year, 1952, used to designate this edition denotes the year during which compilation of the statistics occurred.

Relationship to other Abstract publications.—The annual Statistical Abstract of the United States is, of necessity, limited primarily to the presentation of current data for the country as a whole. To a much lesser extent, it presents data for regions and individual States, and time series of an historical nature. The supplements to the annual Abstract have extended its scope, both geographically and historically. The small area supplements of which the present volume is the most recent, are planned to fulfill the need for summary information for the smaller geographic and political entities in the country. The historical supplement, Historical Statistics of the United States, 1789–1945, issued in 1949, meets the demand for annual data and a limited amount of monthly data carried back, within certain limits, as far as possible in time. A continuation of the time series (most of which end in 1945) in Historical Statistics is included in the form of an historical statistics appendix in current editions of the Statistical Abstract, beginning with the 1949 edition.

Selection of data.—In general, the items selected for inclusion in this volume are those for which the statistics:

1. Represent individual summary measures which are most generally useful in application;
2. Are comparable and available for small areas on a national scale;
3. Offer potentialities for fruitful analysis when combined with, compared to, or otherwise related to the other statistics selected.

The final list of items represents the judgment of many persons. Many individuals and organizations participated in the selection process by reviewing a proposed list of items and contributing valuable comments and suggestions. Experience acquired in preparing and using the previous editions in this series also proved helpful.

Many of the statistics in this volume were obtained from the results of the 1950 Censuses of Agriculture, Population, and Housing. The abundance of the material at hand from the 1950 Censuses made the job of selection more difficult in some respects. The availability of 1950 Census data made it desirable, for purposes of improving comparability between items, to show the data for as many items as possible for the year 1950. This policy was adhered to, even in those instances, where it would have been possible to present data for 1951.

In accordance with the plan to make each edition reasonably complete in itself, although with emphasis on more recent information, certain items which appear in the 1949 edition of the County and City Data Book are reproduced here. Such items include data from the 1948 Census of Business and the 1947 Census of Manufactures. The next scheduled year for the taking of these Censuses is 1954, covering the year 1953. The results from these Censuses will not be available until late in 1954. The items selected for inclusion here from these Censuses represent a condensation of the material appearing in the 1949 edition.

ARRANGEMENT OF TABLES

Two tables form the basic framework of this volume: The county table (table 3) which presents the 128 items of information comprising the "county list"; and the city table (table 4) which presents the 133 items comprising the "city list." (See column heading, pp. IV–VII.)

In the numbering of items, those in the "county list" are numbered as 1–128, those in the "city list" as 201–233. An asterisk (*) placed against the column or item number denotes those items for which comparable statistics appear for all areas (States, standard metropolitan areas, counties, and cities). With minor exceptions, the first 86 items in both the "county list" and the "city list" are on a comparable basis for all areas.

Table 1 summarizes the items which are included in the "county list" and presents the data for the United States, geographic regions and divisions, and States.

Table 2 presents the "county list" for standard metropolitan areas, and for their included counties. Where a standard metropolitan area crosses a State line, subtotals are shown for the portions lying within each State.

Table 3 is the basic county table. The "county list" of items is presented for each county in the United States, with the counties arranged by State.

Table 4 is the basic city table. Here the "city list" of items is presented for each city which had 25,000 inhabitants or more in 1950.

In addition, three tables are presented in Appendix A. Table A–1 presents the population of cities of 25,000 inhabitants or more with the cities arranged according to rank order of population in 1950. Tables A–2 and A–3 each provide a complete list of all urban places in 1950. The difference between these two tables is, in part, one of arrangement. Table A–2 lists the urban places alphabetically under the county in which located and gives the 1950 population. Table A–3 lists the urban places alphabetically under each State, and specifies both name and code number of the county in which located; if the place is also located within a standard metropolitan area, the code number of that area is given.

Appendix D presents the statistics for the "county list" of items for the State economic areas of New England. These statistics are presented to compensate in part for the unavoidable omission of certain of the data for New England Standard Metropolitan Areas in table 2. Statistics in table 2 are mostly obtained from county tabulations, hence are not available for the New England Standard Metropolitan Areas which are drawn on town lines; they are available for the New England State Economic Areas since the State economic areas are drawn uniformly on county lines throughout the Nation.

Maps.—The final section of this volume presents an individual map for each State. Each map contains information showing the boundaries of all counties and standard metropolitan areas, the code numbers used for and the names of all standard metropolitan areas, the total number of counties, and the name and location of each city having 25,000 or more inhabitants in 1950.

In addition, there are two maps of the United States in this volume. The first (p. VIII) shows boundaries of geographic regions, divisions, and States. The second (p. XIV) shows the name and location of all standard metropolitan areas.

Availability of tabulating machine cards containing small-area data.—During the preparation of this volume all the data shown here for each standard metropolitan area, county, and city having 25,000 inhabitants or more were placed on standard 80-column tabulating machine cards. Reproduced sets of these cards can be made available by the Bureau of the Census at cost. Persons or organizations wishing to obtain such or similar services should write to the Director, Bureau of the Census, Washington 25, D. C., indicating their specific needs. The reply, indicating whether the work can be undertaken at the time, will include an estimate of the cost of the work involved. The amount covering the estimated cost submitted, must be received by the Bureau before work may proceed.

Responsibility.—The contents of this volume are taken from a number of sources, as indicated in the specific source notes and explanations which precede the tabular materials. The accuracy and limitations of the statistics presented here are the responsibility of the agency collecting the information. However, the responsibility for the selection of the material and for proper presentation, rests with the Bureau of the Census.

Comment and criticism.—In the planning of successive revisions of a standard volume, it is particularly helpful to the compiling agency to receive the reactions of the users of each edition. To this end, users of this volume are encouraged to send in their suggestions, comments, and criticisms. Such contributions will receive careful consideration and will help to make the next revision more complete and useful.

Geographic Concepts and Codes

GEOGRAPHIC CONCEPTS

Regions, divisions, and States.—The geographic groupings of States by regions and divisions as shown in table 1 are the standard groupings used by the Bureau of the Census. Under this standard arrangement, the Nation is first divided into four regions. The regions are divided, in turn, into nine geographic divisions, each composed of a specific group of contiguous States. (See map, p. VIII.)

The listing of regions, divisions, and States follows a geographic progression. First, the regions are listed, starting with the northeast corner of the Nation, and listing from north to south, then listing the next region to the west. A similar scheme is used for listing component divisions under each region and for listing component States under each division. This arrangement of States by regions and divisions facilitates comparisons of data for States within the same geographic area, and enables the provision of summary figures at levels intermediate between those for the United States and those for an individual State.

Standard metropolitan areas.—For many types of social and economic analyses, it is useful to consider as a unit the entire population in and around the city the activities of which form an integrated social and economic system. Accordingly, the Federal Committee on Standard Metropolitan Areas, composed of representatives of interested Federal agencies, including the Bureau of the Census, and sponsored by the Bureau of the Budget established the "standard metropolitan area" so that a wide variety of statistical data might be presented for such a unit on a uniform basis.

Except in New England, a standard metropolitan area is a county or group of contiguous counties which contains at least one central city of 50,000 inhabitants or more. In addition to the county, or counties, containing such a city, or cities, contiguous counties are included in a standard metropolitan area if according to certain criteria they are essentially metropolitan in character and sufficiently integrated with the central city. The location of standard metropolitan areas in continental United States is shown in the map on p. XIV; for identification and location of standard metropolitan areas in each State, see individual maps of States beginning on p. 560.

The exact composition of each standard metropolitan area is shown in the stub of table 2. These definitions (that is, the listing of counties which comprise each such area) have been recommended by the U. S. Bureau of the Budget for use by all Federal agencies compiling statistical data for general use.[1] They are intended to replace various metropolitan area definitions which have been in general use by Federal statistical agencies.

The following criteria which may result in an area considerably more restricted than the market or trading area, were adopted in determining the boundaries of standard metropolitan areas:

1. Each standard metropolitan area must include at least one city of 50,000 inhabitants or more. Areas may cross State lines.

2. Where two cities of 50,000 inhabitants or more are within 20 miles of each other, they will ordinarily be included in the same area.

3. Each county included in a standard metropolitan area must have either 10,000 nonagricultural workers or 10 percent of the nonagricultural workers in the area, or at least one-half of the county's population must have been included in the "metropolitan district" as defined by the Bureau of the Census. ("Metropolitan districts" were defined for every city of 50,000 inhabitants or more in 1940, two or more such cities sometimes being in one district. In general, metropolitan districts included, in addition to the central city or cities, all adjacent or contiguous minor civil divisions having a population density of 150 or more per square mile.) In addition, nonagricultural workers must constitute at least two-thirds of the total employed labor force of the county.

4. Each county included in a standard metropolitan area must be economically and socially integrated with the central counties of the area. A county has been regarded as integrated (a) if 15 percent or more of the workers living in the county work in the central county of the area, or (b) if 25 percent or more of those working in the county live in the central county of the area, or (c) if telephone calls from the county to the central county of the area average 4 or more calls per subscriber per month. Where satisfactory data on these measures were lacking, considerable reliance was necessarily placed on related evidence and informed local opinion.

Although there may be several cities of 50,000 inhabitants or more in a single standard metropolitan area, not all are necessarily central cities. The largest city in a standard metropolitan area is the principal central city. Any other city of 25,000 inhabitants or more within a standard metropolitan area and having a population amounting to one-third or more of the population of the principal city is also regarded as a central city provided that no more than three cities are defined as central cities of any standard metropolitan area. The name of every central city is included in the name of the area, with the exception that in the case of the New York-Northeastern New Jersey area, "Jersey City" and "Newark" are not part of the name.

In New England the standard metropolitan areas have been defined on a town rather than on a county basis, essentially the same criteria having been applied insofar as they are applicable. In place of the measures included in criterion number 3 above, a population density criterion of 150 persons per square mile, or where strong integration is indicated, 100 persons per square mile, has been adopted.

State economic areas.—A "State economic area" is a county or group of counties which is characterized by a distinctive combination of social and economic characteristics. These areas provide, therefore, a homogeneous grouping of counties for use in statistical tabulations where there is need for a unit of area smaller than the average State but larger than the average county. The system of State economic areas presented here in code form, covers the entire continental United States.

The term economic area is intended to convey the idea that within each of the areas delimited a somewhat distinctive pattern of economy prevails. The term economy is used here in its broadest sense and refers to the patterns of organization and activities by which the population of an area has adjusted to a particular combination of natural resources and other environmental factors. In the delimitation, industrial, commercial, demographic, agricultural, climatic, physiographic, and cultural factors were taken into account, among others. For each county, from 40 to 60 various indexes were considered in assigning it to an economic area. In the instance of agricultural areas, type of farming was a principal factor.

[1] See "Standard Metropolitan Area Definitions," Executive Office of the President, Bureau of the Budget, mimeograph statement, dated October 17, 1950, and "Addendum to list . . .," dated October 8, 1952.

The general principles which governed the delimitation of the State economic areas are given in Bureau of the Census, Population—Agriculture: State Economic Areas: A Description of the Procedure Used in Making a Functional Grouping of the Counties of the United States, by Donald J. Bogue, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., 1950.

The State economic areas have been designed for use in tabulating and publishing Census data of various types and for other purposes. They are one of the new features of the 1950 Census and are the product of research and consultation with the U. S. Department of Agriculture and with State and private agencies. In this volume, each of these areas and its components are identified only by a code and not by specific listing. State economic area tabulations are included here only for the New England States (see Appendix D) where metropolitan State economic area data are presented as a possible substitute for standard metropolitan area data which were not available for most items.

State economic areas are classified as "metropolitan" or "nonmetropolitan" on the basis of their relationship to standard metropolitan areas described previously. For the most part, a metropolitan State economic area is identical with an entire standard metropolitan area if that standard metropolitan area is located entirely within the State; if the standard metropolitan area crosses State lines, each State contains a metropolitan State economic area identical with the particular State's portion of the standard metropolitan area. However, since standard metropolitan areas were established on the basis of the 1950 population while State economic areas were established (to avoid delay) on the basis of the 1940 population, the Muskegon (Mich.) area is classified as a metropolitan State economic area although it is not classified as a standard metropolitan area. On the other hand there are some standard metropolitan areas which are not recognized in the State-economic-area classification. In such cases, the county or counties comprising the standard metropolitan area have been grouped with other counties to form nonmetropolitan areas. (See table below.)

[1] Population in 1940 was over 100,000, but central city had less than 50,000 inhabitants.

Counties.—Counties are, for the most part, those independently organized county governments commonly recognized as the major geographic subdivisions of States (except in Louisiana where such subdivisions are designated as "parishes"). In 1950, there were a total of 3,050 of such independently organized governments.

This total of 3,050, however, does not encompass all the area of continental United States. Nor does it include a number of densely populated centers which are not subject to the jurisdiction of county governments. There are, in all, 53 additional areas which include independent cities, county governments dependent on cities, unorganized county areas, and Federal areas. For purposes of statistical presentation, all these areas are included here as counties; certain of them also appear in the separate tabulation on cities. The District of Columbia which is under Federal jurisdiction and readily fits no category, is included among the counties, the cities, and the States.

For a detailed statement accounting for the variety of types of areas included here in the presentation on counties, see Appendix B, p. 552.

Urbanized areas.—"Urbanized areas" were defined for the first time in the 1950 Census. These areas were established to provide a better separation of urban and rural population in the vicinity of large cities.

Each urbanized area contains at least one central city with 50,000 inhabitants or more in 1940 or according to a special census taken between 1940 and 1950. In addition, it includes the surrounding closely settled incorporated places and unincorporated areas that comprise its "urban fringe." The urban fringe of an urbanized area is that part which is outside the central city or cities.

The following types of areas are embraced if they are contiguous to the central city or cities or if they are contiguous to any area already included in the urban fringe:

1. Incorporated places with 2,500 inhabitants or more in 1940 or at a subsequent special census conducted prior to 1950.

2. Incorporated places with fewer than 2,500 inhabitants containing an area with a concentration of 100 dwelling units or more with a density in this concentration of 500 units or more per square mile. This density represents approximately 2,000 persons per square mile and normally is the minimum found associated with a closely spaced street pattern.

3. Unincorporated territory with at least 500 dwelling units per square mile.

4. Territory devoted to commercial, industrial, transportational, recreational, and other purposes functionally related to the central city.

Also included are outlying noncontiguous areas with the required dwelling unit density located within 1½ miles of the main contiguous urbanized part, measured along the shortest connecting highway, and other outlying areas within one-half mile of such noncontiguous areas which meet the minimum residential density rule.

The urbanized area can be characterized as the physical city as distinguished from both the legal city and the metropolitan community. In general, urbanized areas represent the thickly settled urban core of the standard metropolitan areas. Urbanized areas are smaller than standard metropolitan areas and in most cases are contained in them. However, in a few instances, the fact that the boundaries of urbanized areas are determined by the pattern of urban growth, and those of standard metropolitan areas by county lines, means that there are small segments of urbanized areas which lie outside standard metropolitan areas. There are also some cases in which a single standard metropolitan area contain two urbanized areas. Urbanized areas and standard metropolitan areas also differ somewhat because the former were established for cities recognized before 1950 as having 50,000 or more inhabitants, whereas the latter were established for cities of 50,000 or more as determined in the 1950 Census.

In this volume, figures for urbanized areas are included only to the extent of showing the 1950 population of those urbanized areas in which cities of 25,000 inhabitants or more are located (Item 209). Also shown alongside the urbanized area figures, are those showing population figures (Item 208) for standard metropolitan areas of which the same cities are a part, thereby enabling a ready comparison between the two types of areas.

Cities.—The designation "city," in general, refers to a political subdivision of a State within a defined area over which a municipal corporation has been established to provide general local government for a specific population concentration. A city may be designated as a city, borough, village, or town except in the New England States, New York, and Wisconsin. In those States, a "town" is an area subdivision of the county or the State which usually has the governmental organization and municipal corporation corresponding to that of a "city" but only incidentally relates to a population concentration. In this volume, the cities for which data are included are those having a population of 25,000 inhabitants or more as reported in the 1950 Census. All cities included are incorporated except East Bakersfield, Calif., Kannapolis, N. C., and Oak Ridge, Tenn. These unincorporated places are shown separately in the reports of the 1950 Censuses of Population and Housing and have therefore been included here.

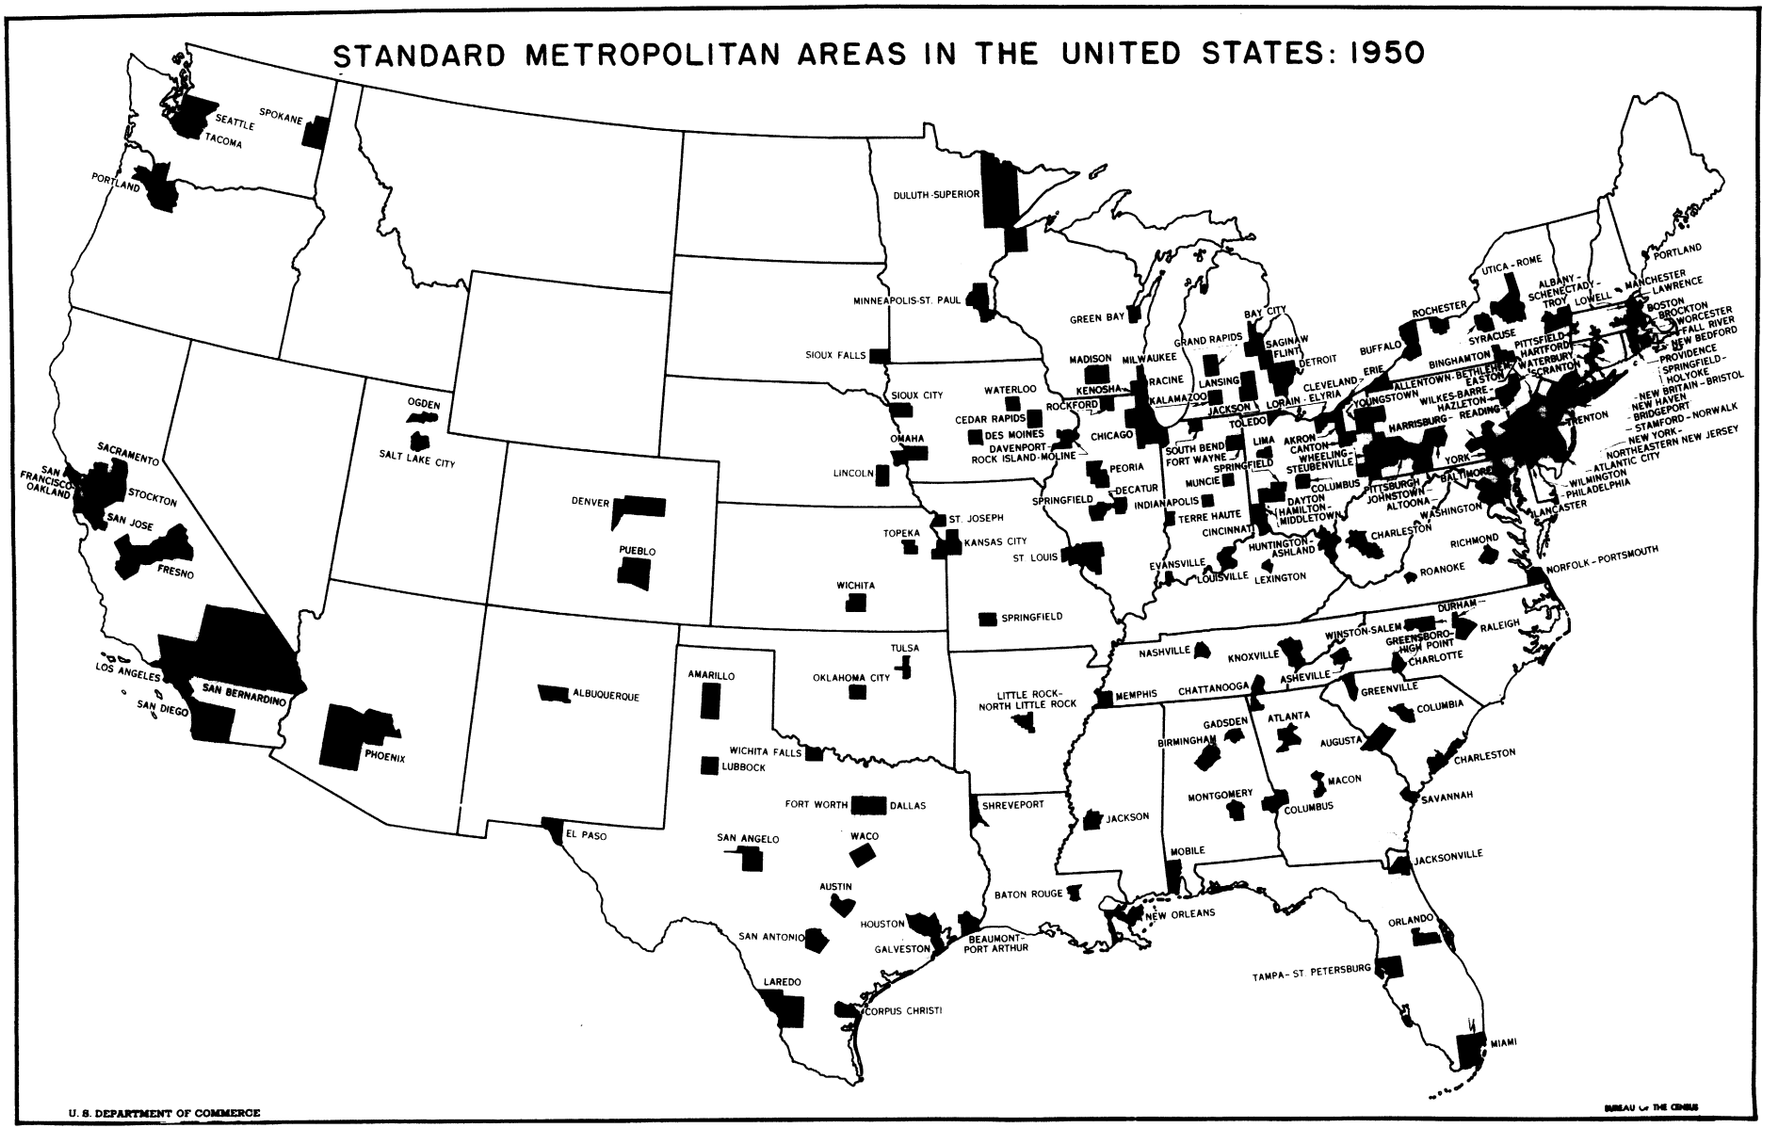
Urban places.—According to the definition that was adopted for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, and villages, (b) incorporated towns of 2,500 inhabitants or more except in New England, New York, and Wisconsin, where "towns" are simply minor civil divisions of counties, (c) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more, and (d) densely settled areas identified as unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. (See above for definition of "urban fringe.") Only incorporated places of 2,500 or more, and unincorporated places of this size outside urban fringes are called urban places. The remaining urban population comprises residents of those portions of urban fringes that are incorporated places of less than 2,500 or are unincorporated.

A complete list of all urban places in continental United States appears in Appendix tables A–2 and A–3.

GEOGRAPHIC CODES



Codes for a number of areas are presented in the three columns preceding the stub of the first items for tables 2, 3, and 4 and also as part of Appendix A–3. They serve to facilitate cross reference between the statistics for States, standard metropolitan areas, counties, and cities and to identify each State economic area and its components.

The State code is a numbering in sequence of the alphabetical arrangement of the States: Alabama, 01, to Wyoming, 49. The standard metropolitan area code is a similar numbering of the 168 standard metropolitan areas arranged alphabetically by name of area: Akron (Ohio) area, 001, to Wichita Falls (Texas) area, 168.[2] Within each State, the numbering of counties alphabetically arranged determines the county code; this code when prefixed by the State code distinguishes each county in the United States.

The State economic area code consists of two parts (as 12–A, or 12–3). The first two digits are the code for the State in which the area is located; the second component is the State economic area code, as such, with a capital letter identifying a metropolitan State economic area, and an Arabic numeral indicating a nonmetropolitan area. State economic area codes with suffix letters (as 01–7a and 01–7b) indicate areas which have been designated to be used separately for agricultural data but in combination for other types of data.

Within each State, the State economic areas have been coded in a sequence which places together areas which have the same general characteristics or possess some major trait in common.

[2] Two areas (Dubuque and Hampton-Newport News-Warwick) officially defined after 1950 (July 1952) appear out of proper order at the end of the list and were coded as 169 and 170.

Source Notes and Explanations

The source references and explanatory statements which follow are intended for clarification toward the proper use of the statistics shown. The explanatory material included, however, is complete only up to a point. It does not entirely duplicate the more detailed explanations of concepts, coverage, definitions of terms, etc. which appear in the original sources. Whenever in doubt, therefore, the user is strongly urged to consult the original sources.

Medians.—Medians are shown here in connection with the data on age of the population, family income, years of school completed, rooms and persons per dwelling unit, and value and rent of dwelling units. The median is defined as the midpoint value which divides a distribution into two equal parts—one-half of the population, families, dwelling units or whatever units constitute the group being measured falling below the median and one-half exceeding the median.

States, Standard Metropolitan Areas, and Counties (Tables 1–3)

The following source notes and explanations relate to the standardized list of items (Items 1–128) which is presented for continental United States, geographic regions, and divisions, and States in table 1; for standard metropolitan areas and their included counties in table 2; and for each county in the United States in table 3. The column heads of all three tables carry identical subject captions and item (column) numbers.

CENSUS OF POPULATION, 1950, AND VITAL STATISTICS, 1950 (Items 1–47)

General note.—The population data presented here are final figures based upon tabulations from the Seventeenth Decennial Census of the population of the United States, its Territories and possessions, conducted as of April 1, 1950. The major portion of the information compiled from the Census of Population appears in U. S. Census of Population: 1950, Volume I, Number of Inhabitants, and in Volume II, Characteristics of the Population. Volume I provides in a single publication the distribution of the Nation's inhabitants among and within the States and the Territories, possessions, etc. The data assembled in Volume I also appear as Chapter A of Volume II. Volume II comprises a series of separately published parts, one for each State and a summary for the United States. The use of separate parts makes available, in a single binding, the basic materials on characteristics of the population for a given State. Within the part for a State, three chapters represent the three series of bulletins also published separately for each State and for the United States: Series P–A, "Number of Inhabitants"; Series P–B, "General Characteristics"; and Series P–C, "Detailed Characteristics." For a listing of tabulated but unpublished statistics for smaller areas, see U. S. Bureau of the Census, U. S. Censuses of Population and Housing: 1950, Key to Published and Tabulated Data for Small Areas, Washington, D. C., 1951.

Definitions of several of the major concepts used in the 1950 Census differ from those used in 1940. A prime example is the change in the urban and rural definition between the two Censuses, the effect of which was a significant increase in the urban population and a decrease in the rural population in most States. Furthermore, certain questions were worded differently on the 1950 Census schedule. The 1950 questions asked were designed to reduce certain types of response errors which were discovered with respect to the questions asked on the 1940 schedules. Still another change between the 1950 and prior Censuses involved the treatment of special groups in the population such as college students living away from home and crew members of American vessels.

These changes were made after consultation with users of Census data in order to improve the statistics, even though it was recognized that comparability would be adversely affected. Users are, therefore, cautioned to examine carefully the complete definitions and other explanatory text in the Population Volumes before making comparisons of these data with those of earlier Censuses.

Certain of the data presented here are noted as being based on a 20-percent sample. On the population schedules, a separate line was filled out for each person enumerated, with every fifth line designated as a sample line. The persons falling on these sample lines were asked additional questions. Estimates of the number of persons with specified characteristics based on these sample data have in all cases been obtained by multiplying the number of persons in the sample containing these characteristics by five. Percentages have been obtained in each case by using the sample values for the denominator as well as the numerator to reduce the sampling variability. For a measure of the sampling variability relative to these data, see the text section on "Reliability of Sample Data," in U. S. Census of Population: 1950, Vol. II.

Items 1–4. Population, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Population: 1950, Vol. II, Ch. B for each State and United States Summary.

In accordance with Census practice dating back to 1790, each person enumerated in the 1950 Census was counted as an inhabitant of his usual place of residence or usual place of abode, that is, the place where he lives and sleeps most of the time. This place is not necessarily the same as his legal residence, voting residence, or domicile, although, in the vast majority of cases, the use of these different bases of classification would produce identical results.

Rank numbers shown were assigned on the basis of population size, each area placed in descending order, greatest to smallest.

The percent increase or decrease in population between 1940 and 1950 was unduly affected in a number of instances by changes in the size of certain areas which occurred during that period. Examples of such changes are annexations by one area of portions of other areas, compensating losses by these other areas, and the formation of new areas. Another factor which affected the degree of change in population indicated for certain areas was a change in the enumeration procedure for college students and crew members of American vessels between 1940 and 1950. In 1950, college students were enumerated in terms of their college residence; in most earlier Censuses, they were enumerated in terms of their parental residence. In the 1950 Census, crew members of American vessels were counted as part of the population of the ports in which they were berthed; in the 1940 Census, they were counted as part of the population of the port from which the vessel operated.

The category "Nonwhite" consists of Negroes, Indians, Japanese, Chinese, and "Other nonwhite" races. "Other nonwhite" includes Filipinos, Koreans, Asiatic Indians, etc. Persons of Mexican birth or ancestry who were not definitely Indian or members of other nonwhite races were classified as white. The racial classification used by the Bureau of the Census does not reflect clear-cut definitions of biological stock and does not group people according to certain physical characteristics. Several categories used obviously refer to nationality. The concept is derived rather from that which is commonly accepted by the general public as reflected in the action of legislative and judicial bodies of the country. There is no question but that this concept lacks scientific precision.

Items 5–6. Area and density, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Population: 1950, Vol. II, Ch. A for each State and United States Summary.

Land area totals include dry land and land temporarily or partially covered by water, such as marsh land, swamps, and river flood plains; streams, sloughs, estuaries, and canals less than one-eighth of a statute mile in width; and lakes, reservoirs, and ponds less than 40 acres in area.

Population per square mile is the average number of inhabitants per square mile of land area.

According to the new definition that was adopted for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, and villages; (b) incorporated towns of 2,500 inhabitants or more, except in New England, New York and Wisconsin where "towns" are simply minor civil divisions of counties; (c) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (d) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. (For definition of urban fringe, see p. XII.) The remaining population is classified as rural.

According to the definition used in 1940, the urban population had been limited to all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and in other areas classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

The rural-nonfarm population includes all persons living outside urban areas who do not live on farms. Although the rural-farm population excludes urban-farm population, virtually all of the farm population is located in rural areas.

Items 10–12. Age, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Population: 1950, Vol. II, Ch. B for each State and United States Summary.

The age classification is based on the age of the person at his last birthday, as of the date of the enumeration visit, that is, in completed years. Age was estimated for 0.19 percent of the 1950 population of the United States for which age was not reported. Preliminary analysis of age distributions from the 1950 Census show that for the United States as a whole there appears to be an underenumeration of children under 5. Likewise, there appears to be an excess over the number expected in the age group 65 years old and over.

For definition of median, see p. XV. Median age was computed on the basis of 5-year age intervals.

Item 13. Migration, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Population: 1950, Vol. II, Ch. B for each State and United States Summary.

These data, based on a 20-percent sample, represent the number of inhabitants one year old and over who were living in a different county or abroad one year prior to the date of enumeration. Residence in 1949 was used in conjunction with residence in 1950 to determine the number of persons who changed and those who did not change residence from 1949 to 1950. Persons who changed residence were classified by type of move. Figures showing persons who, in 1949, were in "same house as in 1950" or who were in "different house, same county in 1950" appear in source volumes. Residence abroad includes residence in all foreign countries and all Territories and possessions of the United States.

Item 14. Potential voters, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Population: 1950, Vol. II, Ch. B for each State and United States Summary.

Data represent the number of citizens, 21 years old and over. "Citizens" include all native persons as well as those born in a foreign country who are naturalized. Included, therefore, are 2 groups of persons who, although citizens, are not potential voters: (a) Those who have lost voting rights by being convicted of a felony; and (b) those who are inmates of certain institutions (i. e., prisons, mental hospitals, etc.). Excluded are aliens or persons born in a foreign country whose citizenship was not reported. Voting requirements (i. e., residence, payment of poll tax, degree of literacy, etc.), which vary from State to State are not taken into account.

Items 15–17. Live births, deaths, and infant deaths, 1950.

Source: Federal Security Agency, National Office of Vital Statistics, Vital Statistics of the United States, 1950 (in preparation).

The statistics on births, deaths, and infant deaths (deaths under 1 year) in 1950 are based on copies of the original certificates filed in State and certain city bureaus of vital statistics. They represent registered occurrences only. Information on completeness of birth registration in individual counties and cities for 1940 is given in Bureau of the Census, "Studies in Completeness of Birth Registration," Vital Statistics—Special Reports, Vol. 17, No. 18, April 20, 1943. Similar information concerning completeness of death registration is not available. In general, total death registration is believed to be more nearly complete than birth registrations. Registration of infant deaths may be approximately the same as birth registration. However, these generalizations apply only to the country as a whole and significant variations in relative completeness probably exist in different areas.

All of the data shown here have been tabulated by place of residence. For births, this means the mother's place of usual residence. For deaths, it refers to the place of usual residence of the decedent. Inasmuch as the registration laws of each State specify that births and deaths be registered at the place of occurrence, the compilation of such data on the same geographic basis as the population census requires a complete reallocation of births and deaths to the place of residence in order to relate them to a given population.

Problems arise in the process of (1) allocating vital events, particularly deaths, on the same basis as the enumerated population, and (2) allocating them so as to describe accurately the mortality conditions of a particular area. This is especially true for areas in which large resident-type institutions, such as mental and tuberculosis hospitals are located. Since the death rate among the patients or inmates of these institutions is usually very high, the death rate of the area is likely to be much higher if these deaths are allocated to the area in which the hospital or institution is located. Beginning with the data for 1949, therefore, all deaths which occur in institutions of all types are allocated to the reported place of prior residence, regardless of the length of time spent by the decedent in the institution. Deaths of military personnel are allocated to the place of death if the length of stay in that place is stated to be 1 year or more. If length of stay in place of death is stated to have been less than 1 year, the death is allocated to the deceased's home residence, if stated.

For a more detailed discussion of the rules of allocation of births and deaths to place of residence, see source publication.

Item 18. Marriages, 1950.

Source: Federal Security Agency, National Office of Vital Statistics, "Marriages: United States, Each State and County, 1950," Vital Statistics—Special Reports, Vol. 37, No. 1, Washington, D. C., Sept. 15, 1952.

Since numbers of marriages are not available from every State, these data are necessarily a composite of available data. The figures represent numbers of marriages for 33 States, and numbers of marriage licenses for the remaining 15 States and the District of Columbia. Totals for some States include estimates for nonreporting counties and for counties which reported figures for less than 12 months of the year. Figures are not presented for counties that reported data for less than 10 months; estimates for missing months are included in those county totals for which figures were reported for 10 or 11 months of the year.

Item 19. Number of families, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Population: 1950, Vol. II, Ch. B for each State and United States Summary.

A family, as defined in the 1950 Census, is a group of two or more persons related by blood, marriage, or adoption, and living together; all such persons are regarded as members of one family. A married couple who are living with relatives are counted as part of the family of the household head, and not as a separate family. However, a lodger and his wife who are not relatives of the household head, or a resident employee and his wife living in, are considered as a separate family. A person living alone or with nonrelatives only is not regarded as a family, but is termed an "unrelated individual." These data are based on a 20-percent sample. For definition of "household," see Item 55.

Items 20–22. Income in 1949 of families, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Population: 1950, Vol. II, Ch. B for each State and United States Summary.

These data based on a 20-percent sample, relate to income before deductions for personal income taxes, social security taxes, bond purchases, union dues, etc. Income, as defined in the 1950 Census, is the sum of money received in 1949, less losses, from the following sources: Wages or salary; net income (or loss) from self employment; net income (or loss) from rents, or receipts from roomers or boarders; royalties; interest, dividends, and periodic income from estates and trust funds; pensions; veterans' payments, armed-forces allotments for dependents, and other governmental payments or assistance; and other income such as contributions for support from persons who are not members of the household, alimony, and periodic receipts from insurance policies or annuities. Such information was requested of persons 14 years of age and over who were included in the sample. If the person in the sample was the head of a family, the income questions were also asked for the other family members as a group in order to obtain the income of the whole family. The composition of families is as found at the time of the interview, although the time period covered by the income statistics is the calendar year 1949. In most cases, the schedule entries for income are based not on records but on memory, usually that of the housewife, which probably results in some underestimation since the tendency is to forget minor or irregular sources of income. Other errors may be due to misrepresentation or to misunderstanding of the income questions.

Income data are also shown in the source for a broader population group classified as "families and unrelated individuals." (See definition for "family" and for "unrelated individual" under Item 19.)

Figures on median income are based on the number of families reporting on income. For definition of median, see p. xv. Median income was computed on the basis of the following income intervals: (a) Less than $500; (b) $500 intervals up to $4,999; (c) $1,000 intervals from $5,000 to $6,999; (d) $7,000 to $9,999; and (e) $10,000 and over.

Items 23–30. Education, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Population: 1950, Vol. II, Ch. B for each State and United States Summary.

Data for school enrollment as well as educational attainment were collected on a 20-percent sample basis. Enrollment was restricted to enrollment in "regular" schools only, that is, those schools where enrollment leads to an elementary or high school diploma, or to a college, university, or professional school degree. If a person was receiving regular instruction at home from a tutor, and the instruction was considered comparable to that of a "regular" school, the person was counted as enrolled. Children enrolled in kindergarten were reported separately in 1950 and were not counted as enrolled in school. Nursery schools were not regarded as regular schools, nor were vocational, trade, or business schools. In general, persons 5 through 17 years of age not reporting on school enrollment were treated as enrolled. The questions on educational attainment likewise applied only to progress in "regular" schools.

The median was computed in terms of a continuous series of numbers representing years completed. For example, the completion of the first year of high school was indicated by 9 and the last year of college by 16. For the sake of comparability, the first year of high school was uniformly represented by 9, although there are some areas with only 7 years of elementary school. The base used in computation was the number of persons reporting years of school completed. For definition of median, see p. xv.

Item 31. Institutional population, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Population: 1950, Vol. II, Ch. B for each State and United States Summary.

The institutional population includes those persons living as inmates in such places as homes for delinquent or dependent children, homes and schools for the mentally or physically handicapped, places providing specialized medical care, homes for the aged, prisons and jails. However, places such as general hospitals, private schools other than specified types, and religious orders not associated with a specified institution were not classified as institutions. If general hospitals had one or more wards devoted to tubercular or mental patients, such patients were included in the institutional population. Staff members and their families were not included in the institutional population.

Items 33–47. Labor force, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Population: 1950, Vol. II, Ch. B for each State and United States Summary.

The 1950 data on labor force and employment status pertain to the calendar week preceding the enumerator's visit. Thus defined, the "census week" is not the same for all respondents, as not all persons were enumerated during the same week.

"Civilian labor force" includes all civilians 14 years old or over who, during the census week, were employed or looking for a job. Employed persons include in addition to persons at work, those who did not work but had a job or business from which they were temporarily absent. Total labor force, which is shown here only as a percentage of total male and total female population 14 years old or over (Items 34 and 35), includes persons on active duty with the armed forces as well as the civilian labor force.

Labor-force figures may be subject to error because of incomplete information obtained for certain groups. Housewives, students, and semiretired persons, who were in the labor force on only a part-time or intermittent basis, failed to report that they were employed or looking for work unless carefully questioned. As a result, the size of the labor force is understated. It is estimated that perhaps 3 percent of the total population 14 years old and over in April 1950 were actually in the labor force but were classified outside the labor force. This percentage will vary from area to area.

Figures on total employed (Item 36) include all civilians 14 years old or over who were (a) at work, or (b) with a job but not at work during the census week, as explained above.

The industry data presented here are derived from a household enumeration, and may differ from data based on industry reports from establishments. Among the reasons for differences between data from these two sources are: (1) The former refers to place of residence whereas the latter refers to place of work, (2) the former represents an unduplicated count whereas the latter counts more than once persons who worked for more than one establishment during the reporting period, (3) the former covers all types of workers whereas the latter generally excludes private household workers, unpaid family workers, and self-employed workers, and (4) somewhat different industrial classification systems are normally used for the two types of data.

The major industry groups included here represent a selection and condensation of those shown in the source. The following listing indicates broadly which industry subgroups are included under each major group:

Item 37. Agriculture—Includes farming and agricultural services, but excludes forestry and fisheries.

Item 38. Mining—Includes mining, quarrying, and crude petroleum and natural-gas extraction.

Item 39. Construction—Includes all types of construction activities.

Item 40. Manufacturing—Includes all types of manufacturing industries.

Item 41. Transportation, communication, and other public utilities—Includes: (a) Transportation such as railroads and railway express service, trucking service and warehousing, taxicab service, and petroleum and gasoline pipelines; (b) telecommunications including telephone and telegraph, both wire and radio; and (c) utilities and sanitary services including electric, gas, steam, and water supply.

Item 42. Wholesale and retail trade—Includes all wholesale trade, and all retail trade including eating and drinking places.

Item 43. Finance, insurance, and real estate—Includes banks, credit agencies, and investment companies, and insurance and real estate.

Item 44. Business and personal services, excluding private households—Includes: (a) Business services such as advertising, accounting, auditing, and bookkeeping services; (b) repair services including automobile repair services and garages; and (c) personal services (excluding private households) such as hotels and lodging places, dressmaking and shoe repair shops, and laundering, cleaning, and dyeing services.

Item 45. Professional and related services—Includes medical and other health services; educational services; welfare, religious, legal, engineering, and architectural services; and nonprofit membership organizations.

CENSUS OF HOUSING, 1950 (Items 48–65)

General note.—The 1950 Census of Housing taken as of April 1, 1950, is a part of the Seventeenth Decennial Census. The housing data presented here are final figures. Data on practically all subjects enumerated in this Census appear in U. S. Census of Housing: 1950, Volume I, General Characteristics. Some of the concepts used in the 1950 Census differ from those used in 1940. The effect of some of the changes in definitions and procedures between these Censuses is discussed below in connection with the specific items involved. For a more complete explanation, see the source publication. Also, for a listing of the tabulated statistics, published and unpublished for smaller areas, see Bureau of the Census, U. S. Censuses of Population and Housing: 1950, Key to Published and Tabulated Data for Small Areas, Washington, D. C., 1951.

The dwelling unit is the reporting unit used in this Census. In general, a dwelling unit is a group of rooms or a single room occupied, or intended for occupancy, as separate living quarters by a family or other group of persons living together or by a person living alone. Ordinarily a dwelling unit is a house, an apartment, or a flat. It may be located in a structure devoted to business or other nonresidential use, such as quarters in a warehouse where the watchman lives, or a merchant's quarters in the back of his shop. Trailers, boats, tents, and railroad cars, when occupied as living quarters, are included in the dwelling unit inventory. Living quarters of the following types are not included: Accommodations predominantly for transients; barracks for workers; living quarters in institutions, general hospitals, and military installations (except for dwelling units in buildings containing only family quarters for staff members). The count of dwelling units in the 1950 Census may be considered as essentially comparable with the count in the 1940 Census, even though some living quarters were classified as separate dwelling units by one definition and not by the other; the over-all effect of these differences is believed to be small.

Certain of the items are noted as being based on a 20-percent sample of the dwelling units reporting. Estimates of the number of dwelling units with specified characteristics based on sample data were in all cases obtained by multiplying by five the number of dwelling units reporting in each sample with the specified characteristic. For a measure of the sampling variability relative to these sampling data, see the text section on "Reliability of Data," in U. S. Census of Housing: 1950, Vol. I.

Item 48. Dwelling units, 1940.

Source: Bureau of the Census, Sixteenth Census Reports, Housing, Vol. I.

In the 1940 Census, a dwelling unit was defined as the living quarters occupied, or intended for occupancy, by one household. A household consisted of a family or other group of persons living together with common housekeeping arrangements, or a person living entirely alone. In 1940, living quarters with five lodgers or more were tabulated as dwelling units, whereas in 1950 such living quarters were not included in the dwelling unit count.

Item 50. Median number of rooms per dwelling unit, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Housing: 1950, Vol. I.

For a definition of median, see p. xv. All rooms which are used, or are suitable for use, as living quarters are counted in determining the number of rooms in the dwelling unit. Not counted as rooms are bathrooms, strip or pullman kitchens, halls or foyers, alcoves, pantries, laundries, closets or storage space, and unused basement or attic rooms not suitable for living quarters. In the computation of the median, a continuous distribution of rooms was assumed. For example, when the median is in the 4-room group, it may vary from 3.5 rooms to 4.5 rooms by tenths of a room. Tenths were used to permit readier comparisons between areas.

Item 51. Percent in one-dwelling unit detached structures, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Housing: 1950, Vol. I.

A one-dwelling unit detached structure has open space on all four sides and contains only one dwelling unit.

Item 52. Percent in structures built in 1940 or later, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Housing: 1950, Vol. I.

Figures are based on a 20-percent sample. The year used to represent the date when the structure was built is the year in which the original construction was completed. The figures do not represent the number of dwelling units added to the inventory during a given period. The year in which remodeling, addition, reconstruction, or conversion may have taken place is not used.

See also general note for Items 48–65.

Item 53. Percent with hot running water, private toilet and bath, and not dilapidated, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Housing: 1950, Vol. I.

Both the structural condition of a dwelling unit and the type of plumbing facilities are considered measures of the quality of housing. The figures shown are limited to dwelling units for which reports were made on all items relevant to the combination of condition and plumbing facilities.

The category "with hot running water" includes those dwelling units having hot piped running water whether it is available the year round or only part of the time. The category "with private toilet and bath" includes those dwelling units with both a flush toilet and a bathtub or shower inside the structure for the exclusive use of the occupants of the unit.

To measure condition, dwelling units were classified as "not dilapidated" or "dilapidated." A dwelling unit was reported as dilapidated when it had serious deficiencies, was run down or neglected, or was of inadequate original construction so that it did not provide adequate shelter or protection against the elements or endangered the safety of the occupants. A dwelling unit was also reported as dilapidated if, because of either inadequate original construction or deterioration, it is below the generally accepted minimum standard for housing, and should be torn down or extensively repaired or rebuilt.

See also general note for Items 48–65.

Item 54. Percent of available vacant units, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Housing: 1950, Vol. I.

These percentages provide a measure of the dwelling units on the housing market in April 1950. They include nonseasonal not dilapidated vacant units for rent or sale; do not include any dilapidated or any seasonal vacant units or vacant units being held off the market for any of a variety of possible reasons. A dwelling unit was considered vacant if no persons were living in it at the time of enumeration (unless its occupants were temporarily absent). New units not yet occupied were enumerated as vacant if construction had proceeded to the extent that all the exterior windows and doors were installed and final usable floors were in place.

See also general note for Items 48–65.

Item 55. Occupied dwelling units, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Housing: 1950, Vol. I.

A dwelling unit is occupied if a person or group of persons was living in it at the time of enumeration or if the occupants were only temporarily absent. However, a dwelling unit occupied by nonresidents (persons who usually live elsewhere) is not classified as occupied.

A household consists of those persons who live in a dwelling unit; by definition, therefore, the number of occupied dwelling units is the same as the number of households. However, there may be small differences in the figures for households shown in the Census of Population reports and the figures for occupied dwelling units shown here because the data collected for population and housing were processed independently.

See also general note for Items 48–65.

Item 56. Median number of persons per occupied unit, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Housing: 1950, Vol. I.

All persons enumerated as members of the household were counted in determining the number of persons who live in the dwelling unit. Lodgers, foster children, wards and resident employees who share the living quarters of the household head are included in the household in addition to family members. For a definition of median, see p. xv. In the computation of the median, a continuous distribution of persons was assumed. For example, when the median is in the 3-person group, it may vary from 2.5 persons to 3.5 persons by tenths of a person. Tenths were used to permit readier comparisons between areas.

Item 57. Percent of units, owner occupied, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Housing: 1950, Vol. I.

A dwelling unit is "owner occupied" if the owner was one of the persons living in the unit even if the dwelling unit was not fully paid for or had a mortgage on it. A unit was also classified as owner occupied when the owner of the unit was a member of the household but was temporarily away from home. A cooperative apartment unit was considered as occupied by the owner if the owner lived in it.

See also general note for Items 48–65.

Item 58. Percent of units occupied by nonwhite households, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Housing: 1950, Vol. I.

Occupied dwelling units are classified by the color of the head of the household. The group designated as "nonwhite" consists of Negroes, Indians, Japanese, Chinese, and other nonwhite races. For a definition of household, see text for Item 55 above. For an explanation of "color" and "race" as used by the Bureau of the Census, see text for Items 1–4.

See also general note for Items 48–65.

Item 59. Percent of units with central heating, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Housing: 1950, Vol. I.

Figures are based on a 20-percent sample. Central heating equipment comprises the categories "Piped steam or hot water" and "Warm air furnace." Other means of heating, with or without flue, are considered to be noncentral heating. A usable heating system or furnace was reported, even though it may have been temporarily out of order or not in operation at the time of enumeration. "Piped steam or hot water" includes radiant, panel and baseboard systems as well as radiation. "Warm air furnace" includes piped and pipeless warm air furnaces, as well as floor and wall furnaces.

See also general note for Items 48–65.

Item 60. Percent of units with mechanical refrigeration, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Housing: 1950, Vol. I.

Figures are based on a 20-percent sample. Mechanical refrigeration includes any type of refrigerator operated by electricity, gas, kerosene, gasoline, or other source of power. The principal refrigeration equipment available to the dwelling unit was reported, whether or not it was in use at the time of enumeration.

See also general note for Items 48–65.

Item 61. Percent of units with radio, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Housing: 1950, Vol. I.

Figures are based on a 20-percent sample and represent the percent of occupied dwelling units which have a radio, even though the set was temporarily out of order or being repaired at the time of the enumeration. The data do not represent the total number of radios in dwelling units because some dwelling units have two or more sets.

See also general note for Items 48–65.

Item 62. Nonfarm dwelling units, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Housing: 1950, Vol. I.

The figures for nonfarm dwelling units include all dwelling units located in urban areas (including urban-farm dwelling units) and all nonfarm dwelling units located in rural areas. For explanation of "urban" and "rural," see text for Items 7–9.

See also general note for Items 48–65.

Item 63. Median value of nonfarm one-dwelling unit structures, owner occupied, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Housing: 1950, Vol. I.

Value represents the amount for which the owner-occupant estimates that the property, including its land, would sell under ordinary conditions and not at forced sale. Value data are limited to nonfarm units in 1-dwelling-unit structures without business, where there is only one dwelling unit included in the property. For a definition of median, see p. xv. In computing the median, the limits of the class interval were assumed to stand at $50 below the beginning and end of each value group. For example, the limits of the interval designated $2,000 to $2,999 were assumed to be $1,950 and $2,950.

See also general note for Items 48–65.

Items 64–65. Median monthly rent for renter-occupied nonfarm dwelling units, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Housing: 1950, Vol. I.

All occupied dwelling units that are not "owner occupied" were classified as "renter-occupied" whether or not any money rent was paid for the living quarters.

"Contract monthly rent" is the rent at the time of the Census enumeration which the renter has contracted to pay, regardless of facilities or services sometimes supplied. "Gross monthly rent" is a computed rent which eliminates rent differentials resulting from the varying practices with respect to the inclusion of heat, utilities, and furniture as part of the contract rent. "Gross monthly rent" is contract monthly rent plus the reported average monthly cost of utilities (water, electricity, gas) and fuels, such as wood, coal, and oil, if these items were paid for by the renter in addition to contract monthly rent. If furniture is included in the contract rent, the reported estimated rent of the dwelling without furniture was used in the computation rather than the contract rent.

Ordinarily the median gross rent is higher than the median contract rent. However, the median gross rent may be lower in an area where there are enough cases in which the estimate of the rental value of furniture included in the contract rent exceeds the cost of utilities.

For a definition of median, see p. xv. In the computation of the median, the limits of the class intervals were assumed to stand at the midpoint of the 1-dollar interval between the end of one of the rent groups and the beginning of the next. Median gross monthly rent was computed in the same manner as median contract monthly rent.

CENSUS OF BUSINESS, 1948 (Items 66–80)

General note.—The 1948 Census of Business covered establishments in the following trades, as defined in the Standard Industrial Classification Manual:[3] All retail trades; all wholesale trades; service trades in the following four groups—(1) personal services, (2) business services (except accounting, auditing, and bookkeeping services, (3) automobile repairs and services, and (4) miscellaneous repair services; hotels, tourist courts and camps; and amusements (including motion picture theaters).

For Census purposes, a business establishment is defined as an enterprise conducted from a recognizable place of business, provided that the annual sales were in excess of $5,000 for a wholesale trade establishment and $500 for an establishment in one of the retail or service trades.

Number of establishments is the number of separate business locations, rather than the number of business companies or organizations, as the Census figures represent information reported separately for each business location or establishment. The establishment count in these tables reflects the number of places, excluding administrative and executive offices of multi-unit organizations, and "chain store" warehouses, which were in business at the end of 1948. A business establishment which operated in more than one kind of business, or was engaged in activities cutting across more than one phase of the Census, was classified on the basis of its major source of receipts.

Sales and receipts represents sales of merchandise and receipts from repairs and other services to customers. The figures reflect deductions for return goods and allowances, but not for trade-in allowances; they exclude sales and excise taxes collected from customers and paid directly to any taxing agency. For establishments primarily engaged in buying or assembling goods for clients, (purchasing agents, syndicate buyers, etc.), the volume of purchases was considered equivalent to sales. For agents and brokers operating on a commission basis, sales represent the value of goods sold rather than the commissions or fees charged.

Active proprietors represents owners and partners of unincorporated business who devoted the major portion of their time to the business in November 1948.

Paid employees represents all employees including salaried officers and executives on the pay roll for the pay period ending nearest November 15, 1948.

Disclosure policy of the Census Bureau limits presentation of data to figures in which no one business establishment predominates and in which no less than three establishments are represented.

Items 66–73. Retail trade, 1948.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Business: 1948, Vol. III.

Retail stores are separate places of business primarily engaged in selling merchandise for personal, household, or farm consumption, and rendering services incidental to the sale of the goods. Some of the important characteristics of a retail trade establishment are: It is usually a recognizable place of business and is engaged in activities to attract the general public to buy; it buys (or receives) merchandise as well as sells; it renders services only incidental or subordinate to selling; it is considered retail by the trade. Not all of these characteristics need be present and some are modified by trade practice.

Excluded from retail trade are peddlers and itinerant vendors. Also excluded are places of business connected with enterprises which are open only to their members or personnel, such as restaurants and bars operated by country clubs, school cafeterias, cafeterias operated by industrial plants for their employees, and establishments operated by agencies of the Federal Government on military posts, hospitals, etc. Although the 1948 Census of Business enumerated all retail stores regardless of size, tabulations exclude data for stores which operated during the entire year 1948 but had sales of less than $500.

Food group (Items 70–71) includes retail stores primarily engaged in selling food for home preparation and consumption. It does not include establishments primarily engaged in selling prepared foods and drinks for consumption on the premises or stores primarily engaged in selling packaged beers and liquors. The food group includes grocery stores; meat and fish (sea food) markets; fruit stores and vegetable markets; candy, nut and confectionery stores; dairy product stores and milk dealers; retail bakeries; and miscellaneous food stores (egg and poultry dealers, delicatessen stores, and food stores primarily engaged in selling specialized foods, such as coffee, tea, spices, and health foods).

Eating and drinking places (Items 72–73) includes retail establishments selling prepared foods and drinks for consumption on the premises, and lunch counters and refreshment stands selling prepared foods and drinks for immediate consumption. Restaurants and lunch counters located within other businesses are not included, unless they are operated as leased departments by outside operators.

Items 74–76. Wholesale trade, 1948.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Business: 1948, Vol. V.

The field of wholesale trade is somewhat broader than the usual conception of "wholesaler" or "wholesale merchant." As well as the more conventional types of wholesalers, wholesale trade includes manufacturer-owned sales outlets, petroleum bulk stations, agents, merchandise brokers, assemblers of farm products, and distributors of industrial goods. It may be helpful in understanding the nature of wholesale trade to note that sales to retailers for resale constitute only about 40 percent of all wholesale trade. Wholesale establishments are separate places of business primarily engaged in selling or acting as an agent in selling merchandise to (or buying it for) business concerns regardless of whether the latter purchased for resale or for business use. The place of business may be a warehouse from which sales are made at wholesale, a sales or brokerage office, or part of an office that may be shared with others. Although the 1948 Census of Business enumerated all wholesale establishments regardless of size, tabulations exclude data for those that operated during the entire year 1948 but had sales of less than $5,000.

Items 77–80. Personal, business, and repair services, 1948.

Source. Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Business: 1948, Vol. VII.

A service establishment is a commercial enterprise engaged primarily in providing service or services. The following major groups are included: (1) Personal service establishments, including barber and beauty shops, cleaning and pressing establishments, laundries, photographic studios, etc.; (2) business service establishments including adjustment and credit bureaus, advertising agencies, private employment agencies, etc.; (3) automotive repairs and services; (4) miscellaneous repair services. All such establishments were enumerated, regardless of size, but those reporting a full year's operations with receipts amounting to less than $500 were omitted from the tabulations.

Among the groups not included are members of professional or scientific bodies such as doctors, lawyers, dentists; dental laboratories; businesses and organizations dealing with finance, education, real estate, insurance, accounting, or transportation; domestic services; radio and television broadcasting; and institutions for religion or charity, hospitals and sanitariums, public utilities, and government operated enterprises.

This coverage is similar to that of the 1939 Business Census. The major changes from the 1939 Census were with respect to businesses in "Custom trades" and "Services incidental to transportation" groups, which were no longer classified in the service trades and were not covered by the 1948 Census. In a number of localities, these exclusions as well as other changes in classification may have a considerable effect in comparing 1948 with 1939 data.

CENSUS OF MANUFACTURES, 1947 (Items 81–86)

General note.—Figures include all establishments employing one or more persons at any time during the year and except for relatively minor modifications, cover all establishments primarily engaged in manufacturing as defined in Executive Office of the President, Bureau of the Budget, Standard Industrial Classification Manual, Volume I, "Manufacturing Industries," November 1945. Manufacturing industries are defined as those engaged in the mechanical or chemical transformation of inorganic or organic substances into new products. These activities are usually carried on in plants, factories, or mills, which characteristically use power-driven machines and materials-handling equipment.

The following types of establishments, though not universally considered to be engaged in manufacturing, are included in the Census of Manufactures: (a) Printing; (b) publishing; (c) custom slaughtering; (d) rice cleaning and polishing; (e) scouring and combing textile fibers; (f) apparel contracting; (g) wood preserving; (h) electroplating, plating and polishing; (i) galvanizing; (j) job stamping, casting, machining; (k) lapidary work; (l) textile, apparel, and leather jobbers who do no manufacturing but who assign material to contract factories for fabrication.

The following types of activities are not included in the data shown: (a) Processing on farms if the raw materials are grown on the farm and if the manufacturing activities are on a small scale without extensive use of paid labor. Also, custom milling, cotton ginning and similar activities; (b) dressing and beneficiating of ores, and the breaking, washing, and grading of coal; (c) jobbing by establishments which do no manufacturing but assign materials to contractors to be fabricated by them; the statistics do, however, include jobbing in the textile, apparel, and leather industries; (d) manufacturing activities of certain establishments which sell most of their products at retail on the premises, e. g., single-shop bakeries; (e) fabricating operations performed at the site of construction by contractors; (f) production by public utilities, of electric power or of heating, cooking, and illuminating gas distributed through mains; (g) custom work to the individual order of household consumers, such as custom tailoring or woodworking; (h) repair and other service activities except specified services performed "for the trade." Machine shops engaged exclusively or almost exclusively in repair work and railroad repair shops are also excluded; (i) engineering, design, and experimental work, except in the aircraft industry or when carried on at establishments primarily engaged in manufacturing activities; (j) education, eleemosynary, and penal institutions engaged in some manufacturing; (k) sawmills producing less than 200 M ft. b.m. of lumber in 1947; (l) logging camps and logging contractors; (m) fire distilling of gum naval stores; (n) establishments producing cutstone and stone products from own quarried stone; (o) establishments primarily rebuilding motor vehicle parts; (p) military arsenals, Navy Yards, and Government printing establishments.

The following types of establishments were canvassed in the census but are not included in the statistics shown here or in 1947 Census of Manufactures, Vol. I, "General Summary" or Vol. II, "Statistics by States": (a) Establishments producing manufactured dairy products but also engaged in distributing fluid milk; (b) motion-picture producers and establishments processing films for motion-picture producers.

The Bureau of the Census is prohibited by law from publishing any statistics that disclose information reported by individual companies. For this reason some figures for individual counties have been withheld. Such figures are included, however, in the appropriate standard metropolitan area totals, State totals, and United States total. In the case of some smaller standard metropolitan areas (those with fewer than 40,000 manufacturing employees in 1947) area totals have been withheld (see table 2) to avoid disclosure by subtraction.

Item 81. Number of manufacturing establishments, 1947.

Source: Bureau of the Census, 1947 Census of Manufactures, Vol. III.

As a rule, the term establishments signifies a single plant or factory and is not necessarily identical with the business unit or company which may consist of one or more establishments. A company operating establishments at more than one location is required to submit a report for each location. Also, companies engaged in distinctly different lines of activity at one location are required to submit separate reports if separate pay roll and inventory records are kept for each activity.

See also general note for Items 81–86.

Item 82. Value added by manufacture, 1947.

Source: Bureau of the Census, 1947 Census of Manufactures, Vol. III.

Figures indicate the approximate value created in the process of manufacture, that is, the contribution of manufacturing establishments to the value of finished manufactured products. Value added is computed by subtracting the sum of cost of materials, supplies, containers, fuels, purchased electricity, and contract work from the total value of products shipped.

Items 83–84. All employees: Number, and salaries and wages, 1947.

Source: Bureau of the Census, 1947 Census of Manufactures, Vol. III.

Employment data represent the annual average of all full-time and part-time persons on the payrolls of reporting establishments. Other persons, such as members of the Armed Forces and pensioners carried on the active rolls but not working, are excluded from the figures.

Wages and salaries represent the gross earnings for the year including commissions, dismissal pay, nonproduction bonuses, vacation and sick leave pay, and compensation in kind, prior to such deductions as employees Social Security contributions, withholding taxes, group insurance, union dues, and savings bonds.

See also general note for Items 81–86.

Items 85–86. Production workers: Number and wages, 1947.

Source: Bureau of the Census, 1947 Census of Manufactures, Vol. III.

Production workers include working foremen and all nonsupervisory workers (including leadmen and trainees) engaged in fabricating, handling, packing, warehousing, shipping, maintenance, repair, janitorial and watchman services, product development, auxiliary production for plant's own use (e. g., power plant) record-keeping, and other services closely associated with these production operations.

Wages represent gross earnings (see text for Item 84) for the year of all production workers on the payroll.

MANUFACTURES (OASI), 1949 AND 1950 (Items 87–96)

General note.—These data are obtained from wage reports filed with the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance by employers subject to the Federal Insurance Contributions Act for all establishments classified as primarily engaged in manufacturing activities. In the compilation of these data, the Bureau of the Census and the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance cooperated to coordinate the data collected by the latter with corresponding Bureau of the Census information from the 1947 Census of Manufactures and from the 1949 and 1950 Annual Surveys of Manufactures. Some differences in comparability still remain in the series produced by the two Bureaus, due largely to the differences in scope, both legal and administrative, and to the fact that additional coordination is necessary in some areas.

These data include employment and pay rolls reported for operating manufacturing establishments. Employment in and pay rolls for central administrative offices, warehouses, and other auxiliaries are excluded. (See source cited below for explanation.) However, in small manufacturing counties, negligible amounts for employment and pay rolls in such auxiliary activities may be included. For such small counties, the source publication did not identify auxiliary activities separately.

Manufacturing establishments with one or more covered employees in January–March are included, while those with no covered employees during this period are excluded. (Covered employment is defined as services performed by a worker for an employer within the United States, with certain specific exceptions.) The major exclusions which affected manufacturing coverage were: Self-employment; casual employment not in the regular course of the employer's trade or business; employment of certain members of the employer's family; employment by Federal, State, or local governments; employment in certain types of nonprofit organizations; and railroad employment.

Furthermore, some reports were received too late for inclusion in the tabulation, and some small companies were excluded because of procedural factors which could have been overcome only at a cost greatly exceeding the available funds. The resulting omission is estimated to represent 0.9 percent of total United States manufacturing employment in March 1950, and about 3.7 percent of the manufacturing establishments. The undercoverage due to these factors is for small establishments and affects all States in the same general proportion. In addition, a negligible amount of undercoverage exists because none of the establishments unclassified by industry has been assigned to manufacturing.

Since the county coding system used by the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance for tabulating these data provides for a maximum of 99 counties in any one State, combinations of figures for two or more contiguous counties were required in the following States: Georgia, Illinois, Kansas, Kentucky, Missouri, North Carolina, Texas, and Virginia. The five boroughs of New York City are combined into one group. The independent cities of Baltimore, Md., and St. Louis, Mo., are treated as separate counties, whereas the 27 independent cities of Virginia are combined with the counties from which they originated.

Items 87–88. Employment in manufacturing, March 1949 and 1950.

Sources: U. S. Department of Commerce, and Federal Security Agency, cooperative report, County Business Patterns, First Quarter 1949, Part II, Nos. 1–4; same for First Quarter 1950.

Figures represent the number of employees during the paid period ending nearest March 15. They are obtained from the employer's tax return and are corrected by estimates in those cases where they were incompletely or improperly reported, as when employers erroneously reported total number of persons employed at any time during the first quarter.

See also general note for Items 87–96.

Items 89–90. Taxable payrolls in manufacturing, first quarter 1949 and first quarter 1950.

Sources: U. S. Department of Commerce, and Federal Security Agency, cooperative report, County Business Patterns, First Quarter 1949, Part II, Nos. 1–4; same for First Quarter 1950.

Figures include all wages paid for covered employment during the quarter, including the cash value of payments in kind, up to the first $3,000 to any one employee from any one employer during the year. In general, all payments for covered employment in the first quarter were taxable unless the employee was paid at the rate of more than $12,000 per year. Data are presented for the first quarter because wages for this quarter are least affected by the provisions of the law limiting taxable wages to $3,000 a year. It is estimated that 96 percent of total earnings in all covered employment for the first quarter of 1949 was taxable, and 97 percent for 1950.

See also general note for Items 87–96.

Items 91–96. Operating manufacturing establishments, by size, first quarter 1950.

Sources: U. S. Department of Commerce, and Federal Security Agency, cooperative report, County Business Patterns, First Quarter 1950, Part II, Nos. 1–4.

An establishment is generally a single place of manufacturing, engaged in a single manufacturing activity, and operated by a single employer. In some few cases, where a single employer operated two or more establishments of the same manufacturing activity in a single county or State, several establishments may be counted as one. Such establishments may then be grouped into county-wide or State-wide establishments. Although this grouping has no effect on the national and State employment and wage aggregates, it would tend to show fewer establishments as a whole, and relatively more large establishments than there actually are in an area.

Size of establishment classifications are based on employment in the mid-March pay period; the size "O" applies to establishments having at least one employee at some other time during the quarter. Size classifications are presented in greater detail in the source publication.

Units which are not allocated to a particular county are included as "State-wide." This group includes reporting units without a fixed location within a State, or with employees in more than one county, or of unknown county locations. The "State-wide" totals appear for each State after the county listings.

CENSUS OF AGRICULTURE, 1950 (Items 97–120)

General note.—The 1950 Census of Agriculture was taken as of April 1, 1950. Inventory items relate to approximately that date. Although the questionnaire specified April 1 for all inventory items, the replies may represent inventories as of the date of enumeration (for the United States, the average date of enumeration fell between April 15 and April 28). Data on acreage and quantity of crops harvested are for the crop year of 1949. Data on sales of crops relate to crops produced in the crop year of 1949; data on sales of livestock relate to the calendar year of 1949; data on sales of livestock products relate to the production in the calendar year of 1949.

For the 1950 Census of Agriculture, places of 3 or more acres were counted as farms if the value of agricultural products in 1949, exclusive of home gardens, amounted to $150 or more; the agricultural products could have been either for home use or for sale. Places of less than 3 acres were counted as farms only if their sales of agricultural products amounted to $150 or more. Places not meeting these criteria because of unusual conditions were counted as farms if normally they could be expected to produce these minimum quantities of farm products. For the 1945 and earlier censuses of agriculture, the definition of a farm was somewhat more inclusive. For an appraisal of the effects on the statistics of the change in the definition of a farm, see U. S. Census of Agriculture: 1950, Vol. II.

All the land under the control of one person or partnership was included as one farm. Control may have been through ownership, or through lease, rental, or cropping arrangement. A farm operator is a person who operates a farm by performing the labor himself or directly supervising it. If he rents land to others, he is listed as the operator of only that land which he retains. In the case of a partnership, one member is included as the operator. The number of farm operators is considered the same as the number of farms.

Land in an individual farm may be located in two or more counties. In such cases the entire farm was enumerated in the county in which the farm headquarters was located.

Commercial farms refer, in general, to all farms with a value of sales of farm products amounting to $1,200 or more. Farms with sales of $250 to $1,199 were classified as commercial only if the farm operator worked off the farm less than 100 days and the income of the farm operator and members of his family received from nonfarm sources was less than the total value of all farm products sold. Commercial farms also exclude farms with sales of less than $250, county, State, private institutional, and experimental farms, grazing associations and other community projects.

Certain of the items presented here are noted as being based on a sample of farms. The sample used for the 1950 Census of Agriculture consisted of all large farms and approximately one-fifth of all remaining farms. (See U. S. Census of Agriculture: 1950, Vol. II, for criteria used in denoting large farms and for detailed discussion of sampling variability.) All sample data shown have been expanded to represent figures for all farms by multiplying by five the totals tabulated from the sample for all except the large farms, and adding totals for large farms.

Items 97–100. Farms and farmland, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Agriculture: 1950, Vol. I.

For census purposes, farms are essentially operating units—not ownership tracts. If a landlord has croppers or other tenants, the land assigned to each is a separate farm even though the landlord may operate the entire holding essentially as one farm in respect to supervision, equipment, rotation practices, purchases of supplies, or sale of products. Tenants are operators who rent from others, or work on shares for others, all the land they operate.

The acreage designated "land in farms" includes considerable areas of land not actually under cultivation, and some land not used for pasture or grazing. All woodland and wasteland owned by farm operators, or included in tracts rented from others, is included as land in farms, unless such land was held for other than agricultural purposes, or unless the acreage of such land held by a farm operator was unusually large. Land used rent free was to be included with land rented from others. Except for open range and grazing lands used under government permit, all grazing land was to be included as land in farms. In some counties, acreage of the land in farms may exceed the approximate land area since land in an individual farm may be located in two or more counties and the entire acreage of a farm is tabulated as being in the county in which the farm headquarters is located.

Items 101–102. Cropland harvested in 1949.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Agriculture: 1950, Vol. I.

Figures include land from which crops were harvested; land from which hay (including wild hay) was cut; and land in small fruits, orchards, vineyards, nurseries, and greenhouses. Each acre of land was included in the land-use category only once even though it may have produced more than one crop in 1949.

Items 103–104. Average value of land and buildings per farm, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Agriculture: 1950, Vol. I.

Data are based on reports for only a sample of the farms. However, the value was not reported for all the farms comprising the sample, and the average represents the average value per farm reporting. The value figures represent the approximate amount for which the land and the buildings on it would sell.

See also general note for Items 97–120.

Items 105–109. Value of farm products sold in 1949.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Agriculture: 1950, Vol. I.

Value of farm products sold represents the approximate total of gross cash income of farms. Gross sales by farmers, however, are greater than gross income to agriculture because of the inclusion of inter-farm sales. Farmers were asked to report gross sales, including estimates for any part of a crop that was yet to be sold, without deduction of expenses of any kind. Trades, such as trading eggs at the stores, were considered sales.

In general, the value of the sales of livestock, livestock products, nursery and greenhouse products, and forest products is for the calendar year 1949. The value of crops sold is for the crop harvested during the crop year immediately preceding the census.

For many farms, the sales enumerated do not represent their total gross cash income since there was no provision for enumerating unusual sources of income such as Government payments and income from off-farm work, custom work, or land rents and other investments. Furthermore, the 1950 Census excluded sales of baby chicks from sales of poultry and poultry products. For this reason there will be an apparent large decrease since 1945 in sales of poultry and poultry products in some counties where hatchery operations are concentrated.

The total value of all producing groups tend to be understated because of failure to include all products yet to be sold, omission of the landlord's share of the sales, and reporting net receipts instead of gross.

Items 110–112. Farm facilities, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Agriculture: 1950, Vol. I.

Figures are based on an approximate 20-percent sample of farms. In addition to information on electricity and telephones, the source publication contains figures for electric water pumps, electric hot water heaters, home freezers, and electric washing machines.

See also general note for Items 97–120.

Items 113–116. Farm equipment and work power, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Agriculture: 1950, Vol. I.

Figures are based on an approximate 20-percent sample of farms. Jeeps and station wagons are included as motor trucks or automobiles, depending on whether they were used for hauling or as passenger vehicles; pickups and truck-trailer combinations are included with trucks.

Figures for number of farms having no tractors, horses, or mules include some farms which have all work power (horses, mules, or tractors) furnished by the landlord and some which hire all the work power from others. Also included are farms which did not report concerning work power and farms which need no work power.

See also general note for Items 97–120.

Items 117–118. Farm expenditures, 1949.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Agriculture: 1950, Vol. I.

Feed expenditures include expenditures for pasture, salt, condiments, concentrates and mineral supplements as well as for grain, hay, and millfeeds, and for grinding and mixing feeds. Expenditures for hired labor include only cash payments; labor expenditures for housework and contract construction work are excluded.

Item 119. Cattle and calves of all ages, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Agriculture: 1950, Vol. I.

Livestock were enumerated on the farm or ranch on which they were located on April 1, regardless of ownership; livestock grazing in national forests, grazing districts, or on open ranges, however, were enumerated on the farms and ranches to which they belonged.

Item 120. Farm operators reporting 100 or more days of off-farm work in 1949.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Agriculture: 1950, Vol. I.

Off-farm work includes work at nonfarm jobs, businesses, or professions, whether performed on the farm premises or elsewhere. Work on another farm for pay or wages (but not exchange work) is also included.

FARM LEVEL-OF-LIVING, E BOND SALES, AND BANKING (Items 121–128)

Items 121–122. Farm-operator family level-of-living index, 1950 and 1940.

Source: Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Farm Operator Level-of-Living Indexes for Counties of the United States, 1930, 1940, 1945, and 1950 (mimeographed), Washington, D. C., May 1952.

These indexes are based on four items that were available from Census of Agriculture data for each county in the United States for 3 years in the 10 years covered. The average level of living for all counties in the United States in 1945 has been used as the base for both the 1940 and 1950 indexes. It should be clearly understood that these farm operator level-of-living indexes only measure relative changes as between different geographic areas and different periods of time. They do not cover all the goods, services, and other satisfactions that make up the level of living of families. However, many studies have shown that the various items are closely associated. Farm houses with electricity are more likely to have other household facilities and conveniences than those without electricity. And farm families with automobiles are more likely to be able to take advantage of various services located away from the farm, such as health facilities, libraries, and recreation, than those without automobiles.

The four items on which the farm operator level-of-living indexes are based are the following: (1) percentage of farms with electricity; (2) percentage of farms with telephones; (3) percentage of farms with automobiles; and (4) average value of products sold or traded in the year preceding the census per farm reporting (adjusted for changes in purchasing power of the farmer's dollar).

Because some of the data were obtained on a sample basis only in 1950, separate indexes would not be very reliable for counties with small numbers of farms. Counties with fewer than 800 farms in 1950 were generally combined with an adjacent county and an index computed for the combination. In the case of 14 counties (6 single counties and 4 combinations of 2 counties each), it was impossible to make a combination with 800 farms without combining counties of divergent economic characteristics. The indexes for these counties and county combinations are subject to a greater sampling error than the other indexes shown. For the following counties, indexes are based on a sample from fewer than 800 farms:

County and State	1950 number of farms
Chatham, Georgia	443
Richmond, Georgia	704
Chattahoochee, Muscogee } Georgia	435
Boyd, Kentucky	686
Jefferson, St. Bernard } Louisiana	424
Barnstable, Dukes } Massachusetts	704
Lincoln, New Mexico	405
Catron, New Mexico	350
El Paso, Texas	769
Garfield, Wayne } Utah	656

For a more detailed discussion of the construction of these indexes, see the source publication.

Item 123. E Bond sales, 1950.

Source: Treasury Department records.

Data were compiled from the regular reports of Series E Bond sales furnished to the Treasury Department by the various Federal Reserve Banks. Series E Bonds are designed for wide distribution among small investors. They were first offered on May 1, 1941; as of July 31, 1952, there were $34,884,000,000 worth of E Bonds outstanding.

Series E Bonds are continuously on sale at most commercial and savings banks, post offices, savings and loan associations, at the Federal Reserve banks and branches, and at the Treasury Department, Washington, D. C.

E Bonds are issued only in the names of individuals. They are sold in the following denominations:

Issue Price	Maturity Value
$18.75	$25.00
37.50	50.00
75.00	100.00
150.00	200.00
375.00	500.00
750.00	1,000.00
7,500.00	10,000.00

There is an annual limit of $20,000 maturity value ($15,000 issue price) for each calendar year of bonds originally issued during that year to any one person. However, for the purpose of computing the limitation, bonds issued to co-owners may be applied to the holdings of either or apportioned between them. Series E Bonds are redeemable after two months from issue date. They can be redeemed on an upward scale of value, but never at a loss to the investor.

Items 124–125. Bank deposits, 1950.

Source: Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Distribution of Bank Deposits by Counties and Standard Metropolitan Areas, December 30, 1950, Washington, D. C., July 1951.

Data include the total and time deposits of individuals, partnerships, and corporations in all banks (commercial, mutual savings, and other types combined) in continental United States. Deposits in branches located outside of the county of the head office have been included with figures for the counties in which the branches are located, rather than with those for the county of the head office. Because of these adjustments, the total for various counties and States may not agree exactly with other tabulations classifying deposits by such areas. Also, minor differences occur between these State figures and other published data since the State totals were compiled from the rounded county figures.

Items 126–128. Savings and loan associations, 1950.

Source: Housing and Home Finance Agency, Home Loan Bank Board, records.

Data are for savings and loan association members of the Federal Home Loan Bank System, a credit reserve system for home financing institutions. These institutions are also known sectionally as cooperative banks or building and loan or homestead associations. As of December 31, all savings and loan associations in the United States and territories numbered 5,992 of which 3,894 or 65 percent were members of the FHL Bank System. Aggregate resources of members, however, amounted to 15.5 billion dollars or 92 percent of the total resources (16.8 billion dollars) of all associations. Member associations include 1,526 federally chartered savings and loan associations (resources, 8.5 billion dollars) and 2,368 State-chartered associations (resources, 7 billion dollars).

Savings capital is the savings and investments of the public in these mutually owned thrift and home financing associations. In all federally chartered and in 1,332 of the State-chartered member institutions, savings accounts are insured up to a maximum of $10,000 per account by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

First mortgage loans outstanding is the unpaid balance of first mortgages, primarily on homes, held by these member associations.

CITIES (Table 4)

The following source notes and explanations relate to the standardized list of items (Items 201–333) presented for cities having 25,000 inhabitants or more in 1950. A large number of these items also appear on a comparable basis for the United States, geographic regions, divisions and States in table 1, for standard metropolitan areas in table 2, and for counties in table 3. To avoid repetition of source notes and descriptive text for these items, cross references have been made to the text for corresponding items in tables 1–3.

Items 207–209. Population, 1950, of area in which located.

Source: Bureau of the Census, U. S. Census of Population: 1950, Vol. II, Ch. A for each State and United States Summary.

Each standard metropolitan area contains at least one city with 50,000 inhabitants or more. In general, urbanized areas represent the thickly settled urban core of the standard metropolitan areas. In a few instances, however, the fact that boundaries of standard metropolitan areas are determined by county lines, and those of urbanized areas by the pattern of urban growth, means that there are small segments of urbanized areas which lie outside standard metropolitan areas.

There are a few cities of 25,000 inhabitants or more which are located in more than one county. In those instances, the figures shown (Item 207) are for that county in which the largest proportion of the city is located. The data for standard metropolitan area (Item 208) and urbanized area (Item 209) are shown for cities under 50,000 inhabitants only when they are included in such areas. County figures are not shown for the independent cities of Virginia, or for Baltimore, Md., and St. Louis, Mo., because these cities are not subject to county jurisdiction.

CONSTRUCTION ACTIVITY, 1950 (Items 287–295)

General note.—Data on urban building authorized in cities of 50,000 population or more by class of construction are published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics in the annual review bulletin of Construction, a monthly publication showing current data for cities of 100,000 population or more. Bulletin No. 1047, Construction, Annual Review, 1950, covers the years 1949 and 1950.

Items 287–290. Value of construction authorized, 1950.

Source: Department of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics, records.

Data cover construction for which building permits were issued and Federal contracts awarded, and only building within corporate limits of the specific city. The valuations shown are the estimates of cost furnished by builders on permit applications. The data have not been adjusted for lapsed permits and the lag between the issuance of a permit or the award of a Federal contract and the start of construction.

New residential building (Item 288) includes hotels, dormitories, tourist cabins, and other nonhousekeeping building in addition to housekeeping units.

New nonresidential building (Item 289) includes: (1) Amusement buildings—recreation structures such as theatres, halls, auditoriums, club and association buildings; lodges; natatoriums; bathhouses; locker buildings; baseball or other observation stands; stadiums; gymnasiums; amusement park buildings; pavilions; and rinks; (2) churches; (3) factories and workshops, including industrial warehouses; (4) commercial garages; (5) private garages; (6) service stations; (7) institutional buildings—hospitals, asylums, medical clinic buildings, sanitariums, charitable institutions, and affiliated buildings; (8) office and bank buildings; (9) public buildings—Federal, State, county, and local government buildings such as post offices, court houses, city halls, fire and police stations, jails, prisons, arsenals, armories; (10) public works and utility buildings—railroad, bus, and airport stations, pumping stations; roundhouses; freight houses; carbarns; ferry houses; radio stations; signal towers; gas and electric plants; public comfort stations; and incinerators; (11) educational buildings—all buildings affiliated with schools, colleges, libraries, museums, observatories, etc.; (12) sheds; (13) stores and other mercantile buildings, including commercial warehouses; and (14) all other miscellaneous buildings.

Items 291–295. New dwelling units authorized, 1950.

Source: Department of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics, records.

New dwelling units include housekeeping units for which building permits were issued and Federal contracts awarded, and only those within the corporate limits of the specific city. The valuations shown (Item 291) are the estimates of cost furnished by builders on permit applications. These data have not been adjusted for lapsed permits and the lag between the issuance of a permit or the award of a Federal contract and the start of construction. For valuation of new residential building including nonhousekeeping units, see Item 288.

Number of new dwelling units in 2-family structures (Item 294) includes units in 1- and 2-family structures with stores; the number in multifamily structures (Item 295) includes units in multifamily structures with stores.

ELECTRIC ENERGY CONSUMPTION, 1950 (Items 296–297)

Items 296–297. Electric energy use and bills, 1950.

Source: Federal Power Commission, annual report, Typical Residential Electric Bills, Cities of 2,500 Population and More, January 1, 1951, and records. See also Federal Power Commission annual report, Typical Electric Bills, Cities of 50,000 Population and More, Washington 25, D. C., January 1, 1951, for average annual residential use and residential bills as well as net monthly bills for representative demands and consumption in commercial light, commercial power, and industrial services.

Figures for average annual residential use (Item 296) are based on sales data as shown by communities in the 1950 annual reports of the utilities.

Figures for typical residential net monthly bill (Item 297) are based on rate schedules applicable to the area within corporate limits of the community shown. The 100 kwh. monthly bill was selected for presentation here because this level covers the annual use of basic residential services excluding cooking and water heating, which in many communities, are supplied by other sources of energy. The annual report, Typical Residential Electric Bills, Cities of 2,500 Population and More, cited above, presents residential electric service data on minimum bills and monthly bills for 15, 25, 40, 100, 250, and 500 kwh. Residential uses covered by the 100 kwh. bill include lighting, small appliances and refrigeration. Further details on the cost of electric service for communities of 1,000 population and more are available from summaries of rate schedules published by the Federal Power Commission in the National Electric Rate Book.

Footnotes indicate briefly the degree of area representation of the figures (whether for a whole community or for a substantially larger contiguous area) and the type of utility ownership (whether publicly owned or privately owned). For more detailed qualification and identification, the user should consult the source.

CITY GOVERNMENT STATISTICS, 1950 (Items 298–313)

General note.—The financial data for cities of over 250,000 were mainly compiled by representatives of the Bureau of the Census directly from official accounts and records of these governments, with the advice and assistance of local officers and employees. Substantially all of the financial data for smaller cities, and of the employment data for all cities, were obtained by mail canvass. Unless otherwise indicated, financial data shown relate to transactions during, or debt outstanding at the closing of, the fiscal years of the respective cities ending between February 1, 1950, and January 31, 1951.

Nation-wide statistics on governmental finances and employment must be compiled and presented in accordance with uniform concepts and categories, rather than according to the highly diverse terminology, organization, and fund structure of individual city governments. Therefore, the figures which appear here for particular cities, although based upon their official records and reports, will not agree directly with specific amounts in such original sources except where particular segments of a city government's accounts conform with standard Census Bureau reporting categories.

Moreover, city governments differ materially in the scope of their responsibilities. Some city corporations provide services (e. g., schools, public assistance, health and hospital care) which in other city areas are performed by the State, the county, or an overlying school district or special district. Accordingly, comparisons of data shown here for individual cities must be made with caution.

Items 298–302. General revenue, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, Compendium of City Government Finances in 1950, Washington, D. C., 1951.

Figures for "general" revenue, and expenditure relate primarily to "general government," as distinct from operation of enterprises and the finances of governmental trust and sinking funds. General revenue includes all revenue from general-government sources (all taxes, all aid received from other governments, and charges and miscellaneous revenue) and consists of all cash receipts other than from borrowing, disposal of assets, recovery of amounts previously expended or agency transactions, but net of refunds of amounts previously received. General revenue includes net contributions from enterprises and any amounts of taxes and other revenue from general-government sources credited directly to sinking trust and enterprise funds. Identical amounts are included in computing general expenditure for contributions to such funds.

Total taxes (Item 299) include proceeds (net of refunds and impounded amounts paid under protest) of all taxes imposed and collected by a government or its agent, and locally collected and retained shares of State-imposed taxes.

Property taxes (Item 300) represent taxes conditioned on ownership of property and measured by its value. They include general property taxes relating to property as a whole, real and personal, tangible and intangible, whether taxed at a single rate or at classified rates, and taxes on selected types of property, such as motor vehicles or certain or all intangibles. They exclude taxes or other charges on ownership of property measured by any other standard than value such as income, area, front footage, benefit accrued from specific public improvements, etc.

Aid received (Item 301) from other governments represents amounts, other than loans, received from other governments—Federal, State, or local—for use in performing specific functions or for general financial support.

Charges and miscellaneous revenue (Item 302) represents all nontax general revenue other than aid received from other governments. It includes charges for current services, special assessments for capital outlay, contributions from enterprises, and other and unallocable miscellaneous revenue (interest earnings, donations from private sources, court fines and forfeits, etc.).

See also general note for Items 298–313.

Items 303–310. General expenditure, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, Compendium of City Government Finances in 1950, Washington, D. C., 1951.

General expenditure includes all charges arising from the conduct of general government activities, except the conduct of enterprises and transactions of sinking and trust funds. Data generally represent charges incurred, but when adequate accrual accounting records were lacking, cash disbursements have been taken as equivalent to expenditure.

Provision for debt retirement (Item 304) refers to current charges for retirement of debt as distinguished from the amount of debt retired during the period.

Total operation expenditure (Item 305) includes expenses arising from direct performance of governmental functions and resulting in no addition to capital assets. It includes charges for personal and contractual services, supplies, materials and other direct costs of current performance of functions (including payments to other governments on a contractual basis as distinguished from fiscal aid payments) and direct payments to individuals and private organizations of a gratuitous nature and not in return for services rendered, such as assistance to the needy, contributions in support of private organizations, and the like.

Public safety (Item 306) refers to protection of persons and property against criminal, fire, military, natural, and other hazards.

Schools (Item 307) refers to institutions of higher education and elementary and secondary schools operated by the city, special educational programs (e. g., vocational education, vocational rehabilitation, veterans' education, etc.), and supervision of education. School expenditures include such special educational facilities and services when operated by the school system, as school health and recreation programs, school-lunch program, transportation of students, special classes for the handicapped, school libraries and the like. Operation expenditure figures shown here relate only to city corporation expenditures for school purposes, and do not include spending by the overlying school districts which administer public education within about two-thirds of these areas. For expenditures of city school systems including independent school systems, see Item 317.

Public welfare (Item 308) refers to support of and assistance to needy persons, except separable activities for provision of health, hospital, or educational services for the needy.

Health and hospitals (Item 309) refers to conservation and improvement of public health (in general and for special classes of the public), prevention and amelioration of special types of illness other than by hospital care, provision of health services to needy persons in connection with public-assistance programs, and operation by the city of general and special hospitals (and institutions for the handicapped), and payments to other governments and to privately maintained institutions for the care of patients. Where readily separable from public welfare, expenditure for hospitalization of needy persons in connection with public-assistance programs is included under health and hospitals.

Capital outlay (Item 310) consists of expenditure—including that financed from borrowed money—for purchase or construction of fixed assets (land, buildings, permanent improvements, and durable equipment) including additions, replacements, and major alterations. No reduction of capital outlay expenditure is made for insurance adjustments, sales of equipment, reimbursements, or other offsetting receipts.

Item 311. Gross debt, 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, Compendium of City Government Finances, 1950, Washington, D. C., 1951.

Gross debt is the total of outstanding long- and short-term debt. It includes both general debt incurred by a government to finance its general government activities, and enterprise debt incurred to finance undertakings which involve selling, or producing for sale to the general public, goods or services which are usually sold or produced for profit under private auspices.

Items 312–313. City government employment, October 1950.

Source: Bureau of the Census, City Employment in 1950 (Government Employment: 1950, No. 6), Washington, D. C., April 1951.

For a detailed discussion relating to the methods of estimating public employment, and procedural and technical aspects of the Government Employment Survey, see the Bureau of the Census report, State Distribution of Public Employment in 1950 (Government Employment: 1950, No. 7), Washington, D. C., March 1951.

The data on number of employees are for number of persons on the pay roll in the pay period ending nearest October 31, 1950, and include all employees with permanent, indefinite or temporary tenure, elective and other officials, judges, etc., paid by the municipality. Persons on work relief or contractors and their employees are not included. Pay roll figures represent gross pay roll before deductions, and include salaries, wages, fees, and other compensation earned in October 1950 by officials and other employees.

BANKING, SCHOOLS, HOSPITALS, AND CLIMATE (Items 314–333)

Items 314–315. Banking, 1950.

Source: Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, records.

The coverage of all commercial banks in the areas listed is complete, or practically so. In some areas, banks or branches outside of the specified city are included. Variations of more than 10 percent from complete coverage are indicated by footnotes.

Deposits are as of December 30, and comprise total deposits, except interbank deposits. Bank debits to deposit accounts are calendar-year data and include debits or charges to deposit accounts of individuals, partnerships, corporations, the United States Government, and State and local governments. They also include debits to time or savings accounts, payments from trust funds on deposit in the banking department, and payments of certificates of deposit. Excluded are payments of certified and officers' checks, payments in settlement of clearing house balances, charges to expense and miscellaneous accounts, corrections and similar charges, and debits to the accounts of other banks, that is, to interbank accounts.

Item 316. Post Office gross receipts, 1950.

Source: Post Office Department, Bureau of Post Office Operations, Receipts and Classes of Post Offices, July 1, 1951, Washington, D. C.

Gross receipts include all post office receipts for the calendar year from money order business, postal savings, and certain other extraordinary items. Figures represent receipts for a particular post office area which may not be coextensive with the area of the city with which the post office is identified. In some instances, the area served by the post office may cover only a part of the city, as in New York City which is serviced by other independent post offices as well as the New York Post Office. On the other hand certain postal districts cover territory beyond the political limits of the city. No attempt has been made to reconcile these differences in geographical coverage.

Items 317–322. City school systems, 1949–1950.

Source: Federal Security Agency, Office of Education, records.

Data are for school systems serving incorporated places of 25,000 inhabitants or more, except where such cities are served by a school system including a much larger area, both urban and rural, as for example, an entire county. In many cities the schools are not a part of the regular city government, but constitute a separate school government (referred to as an independent school district) with power to tax and issue bonds within certain limits. Other school systems, however, are departments of the city government and are supported by an appropriation from the City Council. Both these types of school system are included here.

Total expenditure (Item 317) includes expenditures for full-time public day schools only, excluding part-time, evening and summer schools. It includes expenditures for the six functional accounts: Administration, instruction, auxiliary services, operation of plant, maintenance of plant, and fixed charges. It excludes all expenditures for capital outlay (new grounds, buildings, and equipment) and debt services (all interest, and redemption of bonds and loans). It also excludes all expenditures for community services such as public libraries, public recreation, and subsidies to private schools. These expenditure data are not comparable with those shown for Item 307 (operation expenditures for schools) which represent city corporation expenditures for school purposes. See also text for Item 307 for explanation of differences.

Number of elementary and secondary schools (Item 318) includes full-time public day schools only. It excludes nursery, kindergarten and junior college programs and part-time, evening, and summer schools.

Number of teachers (Item 319) includes supervisors, principals, teachers, and other instructional staff such as librarians, study hall keepers, deans, guidance officers, psychiatrists, etc., who work directly with pupils.

Enrollment (Item 320) figures represent the total number of different pupils enrolled at any time during the year in the regular full-time day school in nursery, kindergarten, elementary, secondary, and junior college programs.

Average salary of teachers (Item 321) represents the total paid in salaries to the persons included in Item 319 divided by the number of persons shown for that item.

Average expenditure per pupil (Item 322) represents the average current expense per pupil in average daily attendance (Item 317 divided by the average daily attendance in full-time elementary and secondary day schools).

Items 323–326. Hospitals, 1950.

Source: The American Hospital Association, Chicago, Ill.; Hospitals, Administrators Guide Issue, Part II, June 1951.

Hospital data shown here are a summarization of the figures published for individually-listed hospitals in the source publication. The data appearing in the source were based on questionnaires mailed to all hospitals registered by the American Medical Association and returned by a high percentage of hospitals, plus data obtained from other sources. Hospitals were asked for information as of September 30, 1950, or as of the close of their most recent fiscal year.

While the data shown here include hospitals of all types, coverage of each type varies in the extent of completeness. Coverage is fairly complete with respect to general hospitals, tuberculosis hospitals, mental hospitals, and Federal Government hospitals, but excludes almost entirely institutions and services commonly referred to as convalescent and resting homes, nursing homes, maternity hospitals, infirmaries, old-age homes, sanitoriums, etc.

Another listing of hospitals quite similar in its coverage of these types of institutions appears in a publication issued in May 1951 by the American Medical Association entitled Hospital Service in the United States, "The 1950 Census of Hospitals." This publication is a reprint from the Hospital Number of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Items 327–333. Climate.

Source: Weather Bureau records.

Basic climatic data shown are for years of record through 1951 and cover periods ranging up to 60 years. Nearly one-fourth of the cities included here do not have weather stations located in them. For the majority of these cities, observations from nearby stations having approximately the same climatic conditions have been substituted. Substitutions are indicated by footnotes; see Appendix C for the complete list of these cities and substituted nearby stations. For 9 cities, however, there were no nearby representative observing points and consequently no data are available for those cities; for other cities, where a note indicates that summarized data are not available, it does not necessarily follow that there were no basic observations.

Mean temperature (Items 327–328) is defined as the mean of all the daily average temperatures for the specified months of record. The length (time span) of the record is such that they may be considered adequate for all ordinary comparisons.

Record temperature represents the highest (Item 329) and lowest (Item 330) temperature ever recorded. While these values are related to the length of record (which is not strictly uniform for all cities shown), they are considered adequate for usual comparisons. In using these values it should be remembered that they indicate extreme conditions and that temperatures approaching these values occur very infrequently.

Mean annual precipitation data (Item 331) have an accuracy comparable to that for mean temperature data (see above).

Mean annual percent of possible sunshine (Item 332) includes data from those stations having automatic sunshine recorders for a considerable period of time and for which these records had been summarized. These values show the relationship between the number of hours of sunshine as recorded by instrument and the number of hours between sunrise and sunset for each day during the year.

Mean annual degree days, 65° base (Item 333) is the annual sum of the differences between 65° and the daily mean temperatures below 65°. The degree day total is not affected when the temperature is 65° or higher. These data are compiled from the total number of degree days each month for the full period of record, as computed by a method equivalent to using the mean temperature for each separate day. The degree day value is based on the assumption that, in order to heat buildings to a temperature of approximately 70°, the amount of fuel or heat used per day is proportional to the number of degrees the outside temperature falls below 65°.
